WEATHER OBSERVATIONS.

Low pressures prevail from Oregon and northern California eastward to the Missouri valley and from Colorado and Kansas northeastward to Minnesota, with rain or snow on the Pacific coast and in most of the Rocky mountain region. An area of high pressure, attended by severely cold weather, is central over Alberta, where the thermometers register more than 20 degrees below zero and temperatures below zero extend to Montana and western North Dakota. Moderate temperatures prevail elsewhere. High pressures are noted from the Atlantic coast to the lower Mississippi valley. The northwesterly movement of the western low and the approach of the northwestern high will be attended by unsettled weather in this vicinity tonight and Tuesday, with probably rain or snow, and colder tonight and much colder Tuesday.
